"Abe Martin" knows politics and politicians from the big los up.

He knows their weaknesses, their vanieles and their strength, and he kows how to turn these qualities inside out and present them from all angles, forming the most humorous and instructive articles that will be sent out from the convention.

His special letters will appear in The Courier, beginning tomorrow He will make a "keynote speech," "pick the winner," and give a running account of the big gathering that will write rings around any other correspondent in the field. Miss Margaret Young, began as a society entertainer in Detroit, and evernight was proclaimed as a vaudeville headliner. There processions as a value of the accuracy for a lways a reason behind success, and in her first Victor record, "Oh! By Jingo!" when you hear it, will tell you why. It is song with a charm and freshoes that entitles Miss Young to be numbered among the Victor Artists.

Forsaken

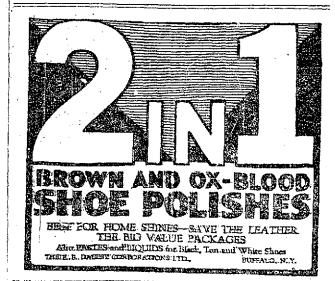

Teader songs that stir the memory are always compelling. This song is that of a lover at the grave of his beloved, and as Kreister plays "Forsaken" in "double-stopa," against a soft orchestral background enriched with barps, it becomes most compelling. Both the artist and the number are in real accord in this record.

Cood-Bye-Tosti

Evan Williams, a beloved Victor Artist, is gone, but he has left to us an heritage that will always live, the charm of his sublime voice. In "Good-Bye" his last record, made shortly before he passed on, is as if he had echoed his immortality. To those who know the heavity of his voice the painting of his charm is needlits; and the those who do not own an Evan Williams' Record should by all means hear this number
